Here is another "musical" anecdote. The other day no enthusiastic young man called on a well-known composer, and begged him to hear Mamile him sing, and if he approved his vocal talent to get him an engagement on the stage. "But are you quite sure you are fit for a professional singer's life?" replied the composer. "Have you the necessary qualities, do you think to succeed a a vocalist?" "Well, sir," replied the youth without a moment's hesitation, "I think I can say I have. I have, at all events, learned | Nagasak how to exist for three days without eating." A colebrated Franch traveller remarked the English have fifty religious and only one sauce. The, no doubt, shows ignorance as to religion, but a great deal of truth as regards the sauce, which, probably, was referred to as the very Emposent concoction of a white sauce consisting sither of some floor, butter, and milk, or some bread and milk both equally tasteless, and making the despair of foreign travellers in this country who are accustomed to good French sauces. The many English travellers going to the Paris Exhibition at this time will no doubt be struck with the difference between fine French cookery and the somewhat monotonous English cookery. and it may be worth while to ask what is the secret of the well-known success of French cookery. This secret is simply the "stock-pot," a preparation of concentrated most juice enabling the cook to give to all dishes soups, sauces, and entrees the fine most-flavour which distinguishes refined cookery from coarse cookery. Many cooks, undoubtedly, know how to prepare lock, but in most cases the quality of such stock is too week and insipid, and besides does t keep in anything like warm weather; whilst the contrary, Liebig Company's Extract of Mest, being the finest concentrated mest-juice (11b, extract equal to 40lb, best lean mest), keeps for any length of time, and in any temperature. and enables the cook to obtain the bighest perfection in French cookery. The warm season coming on, this may be a useful hint to ladies
